January-February 2017

Hi Friends -

You must have heard it, as I have: "I don't want Trump to fail, because if the president succeeds, the whole country succeeds." Of course his supporters feel that way, but I've even heard it from some liberals (which really shouldn't surprise me.)

Well, I am proud to say that I hope he does fail. I hope he fails to attack the civil and human rights of Muslim-Americans. I hope he fails to break up loving families with mass deportation. I hope he fails to curtail women's reproductive freedom. I hope he fails to start an intensified arms race with Russia. I hope he fails to cut Social Security and Medicare benefits, and repeal the Affordable Care Act. And most of all, I hope he fails to complete his term as president, and I don't care how it ends, as long as it does.

Having said that, the only reasonable and responsible response to Trump is to obstruct, disrupt, and discredit him at every turn by any means necessary, by any means available. Any. Block his initiatives. Stall his appointees. When you have something on him, use it. If you don't have anything, find something. And if you can't find anything, make something up. A lie is as good as the truth if you can get enough people to believe it. So just keep repeating it, Trump style, until they do. You know, like birtherism.

Much as I admire Michelle Obama, frankly I am sick of "when they go low, we go high." Her husband tried that eight years ago and look at how his high-minded, bipartisan overtures worked out. Liberals, take a cue from The Untouchables: "They pull a knife, you pull a gun. He sends one of yours to the hospital, you send one of his to the morgue. That's the Chicago way." (Also the Republican way.) A bit extreme, I'll admit. But let's face it. It's not that liberals bring knives to gunfights. They bring cookies.

Perhaps he is giving voice to their rage, fear, prejudice, and hatred. They seem to cheer him because he is getting away with expressing the sick thoughts they don't dare to say.

Jerome Jennings: The Beast (Iola): Clearly inspired by the seminal hard bop of Art Blakey's Jazz

Messengers, this sextet date by drummer Jerome Jennings is one strong debut release. Jennings and his colleagues, including the eminent bassist Christian McBride, present a strong program of well chosen tunes with a few delightful surprises, like Ben Webster's catchy, but seldom played, "Did You Call Her Today?" and — really — a jazz treatment of the Mr. Softee ice cream truck jingle.

Tomoko Ohno / Ricardo Lew / Nestor Tedesco: Tres Sabores (Midway Point Music): Jazz, Argentine

tango, classical music, and more are woven together seamlessly in this highly original and fascinating project by pianist Tomoko Ohno, guitarist Ricardo Lew, and cellist Nestor Tedesco. The repertoire is diverse — three compositions by Piazzola, one each by Rachmaninoff and Cavaquinho, two old jazz chestnuts, and three of Ohno's originals — and the interpretations are insightful and impeccable. Steve Slagle: Alto Manhattan (Panorama): Alto saxophonist-flutist Steve Slagle is one musician who never disappoints, never lets you down. Supported by a superb rhythm section — pianist Lawrence Fields, bassist Gerald Cannon, drummer Bill Stewart, and Roman Diaz on congas — and joined on three tracks by fellow saxophonist and longtime associate Joe Lovano, Slagle delivers the no-frills, no-nonsense jazz for which he is known in a set of standards and originals highlighted by his solo rendering of "Body and Soul." Joris Teepe & Don Braden: Conversations (Creative Perspective Music): Collaborators for nearly twenty-five years, bassist Joris Teepe and tenor saxophonist-flutist are a tight and intuitive team. Braden's signature blend of warmth and intensity meld perfectly with Teepe's deep and deft lines throughout, and particularly on the two duo tracks, Charles Mingus' "Goodbye Pork Pie Hat" and Kurt Weil's "This Is New." Two of the most sensitive and creative drummers on today's scene join them for the remaining numbers Matt Wilson (on four) and Gene Jackson (on three). UPCOMING AREA JAZZ EVENTS
